— What you'll like about the neighbourhood —

Rosemont—La Petite-Patrie : dynamic and safe

This borough with its rich industrial past has become the neighbourhood of choice for many families, workers and retirees thanks to its advantages. It attracts its residents with friendly businesses, green spaces and varied cultural activities.

Résidence Des Ateliers was built on the site of the former municipal workshops of Ville de Montréal. The name of the residence pays tribute to the artisans - tinsmiths, carpenters, painters, etc. - who worked there from 1909 onwards. Today, the industrial buildings have given way to la dolce vita: you only have to walk a few steps to enjoy it all. Here, the small bakery, the pharmacy or a café-terrace are never far away, the mythical Plaza Saint-Hubert welcomes you with its boutiques and the magnificent Marc-Favreau library is your immediate neighbour. Cyclists will find an ever-growing network of bicycle paths that in some places even double as a gym or an open-air art gallery.

The residence offers a direct link to downtown by car and by metro as it is located directly above the Rosemont metro station.

Moving to Rosemont is an invitation to enjoy life in all its simplicity.
